He Concludes that by the End of the Pres-ent Congress the Nursius Will Have Vanished and the Foundation Laid for Equal Extravagance in the Future.

WASHINGTON, July 23.-Judge Holman has taken a hand at figuring on the receipts and expenditures of the Government, and a constusion reached by him is convincing, and is that by the end of the present Congress the surplus will have vanished and the foundations laid for equally extravagant expenditures in the future. The Judge said to THE Bux correspondent to-day:
"The Secretary of the Treasury estimates

the revenues, independent of the Post Office Department, for the present fiscal year at $385,000,000, and the expenditures as follows: Annual appropriations, $259,802,024,90; permanent appropriations, including interest on the public debt and the sinking fund. $101 .-628,433; total, $341,430,477.70, leaving a surplus in the Treasury at the close of this fiscal year of $43.678,583.01. Now, the aggregate of the general appropriations bills which have passed and are now pending and will pass. safely sat down at $356,000,000, to which must be added the miscellaneous appropriations, which will reach at least $5,000,000 and perhaps materially exceed that sum. This would make the appropriations during this session at least $361,000,000. The final summing up. however, is likely to increase rather than diminish these figures. Add to this sum the permanent appropriations, $101,628,453, and the aggregate appropriations, annual and permanent, for this fiscal year will be $462.628,453. The receipts and expenditures of the Post Office Department are not embraced in the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury. There will be a deficit in the revenues of the Post Office Department of about $7,020,361.65, but as the appropriations for that department, $72,434,361,65, are embraced in the annual appropriations, the estimated receipts of that department, $65,414,000, must of course be added to the above estimated revenues of $385,000,000. This would make the whole revenues from all sources $450 .-414,000. So the amount would stand thus: Bevenues from all sources under existing laws, $450,including the sinking fund, $462,628,453. You can see that if the McKinley bill passes and reduces the revenue $60,000,000, as claimed. there is no use talking about the surplus, or even the sinking fund, which amounts this year to $41,159,078, for the deficit would exceed, as will be seen, $12,000,000 under the present laws. The increase over the appropresent laws. The increase over the appropriations of last year will be at least $67,280,-937, but the permanent appropriations for this year are $6,962,602 less than last year, so the actual increase of annual appropriations is $44,243,539. The appropriations under the dependent Pension Law are not included in the figures I have mentioned. They are not yet made, and will not be until the next session. They will not be as large as has been claimed, but they will reach about $36,009,000 a year.

included in the ligures I have mentioned. They are not yet made, and will not be unit included in the ligures I have mentioned. They are not yet made, and will not be unit has been claimed, but they will reach about $30,000,000 a year.

When you spoak of ships of war, fortification of the construction of the construction of war thinks, you have contracts outstanding and authorized for the construction of war, ships which would involve a future appropriation of $20,000,000, and of our more war ships, three of them to construction of war ships which would involve a future appropriation of $20,000,000, and of four more war ships, three of them to construction of war ships, three of them to construction of war ships, three of them to construct the world war and the shift of the construction of war ships, three of them to construct the world war and war and the shift of the world war and the world war and war and war and war and the world war and war ans year, and the makinier bill becomes a law, reducing the revenues $60,000,000, the revenues of the current year will not meet the expenditures and the requirements of the sinking fund, independent of the surplus now in the Treasury. If any surplus remains in the Treasury at the end of this fiscal year it will be a portion of the now existing surplus and trust fund.

The fact is, the rules of the House favor extravagant appropriations and victous legisla-tion. In all former Congresses the value of a strong and vigorous minority has been appre-ciated, for in the nature of things the minority ciated, for in the nature of things the minority resists excessive appropriations, the creation of new offices and increased salaries, but under the pretence of giving the majority the right to legislate, the minority has been rendered absolutely powerless, and three members—the Speaker of the House, the Chairman of the Committees of Ways and Means and of Appropriations—become the majority, and practically, if not absolutely, control the legislation of the House. They decide what lillieshall be obsered. Billis are not even considered in the House. A bill adding seventeen Circuit sudges to our Federal judicial system, salary of each $6.000, was passed under these rules, with three hours of debate only and no opportunity to amend. The Oklahoma bill, under their rule, passed when only some seven pages out of about forty-two had been read for consideration and amendment as to a large region of country, virtually annulling the homestead aw. I only mention these as examples of our egislation under the new rule of three members of the House.

"But with this unexampled extravagance of Congress." I home for at least one other result.

egislation under the new rule of three members of the House.

"But with this unexampled extravagance of Concress, I hope for at least one other result. That is, that the farmers, who bear the heaviest weight of government, both State and national, whose great industry has been for years, and still is grievously oppressed by the perpictor is grievously oppressed by the perpictor of a property of a judicious indeed, all laboring men will begin to consider serieusly the propriety of a judicious income tax, so that the great capital interests which control Congress and interests which control congress send interests at the expense of the general weifare, will be compelled to bear a just share of the burdens of the Government. I tell you that whatever may be said against it, a judicious income tax, which would reach fairly and justly the great private estates which our class legislation has virtually constant and the extended of the former of the surface of the surface of the surface of the surface of the given the constant of the surface of the surface of the given the surface of the surfac which would reach fairly and justly the great private estates which our class legislation has virtually created, would do a great deal in pre-yenting appropriations and victous laws. When the wealth of the country bears a rea-sonable portion of the tax which swells into nearly four hundred millions a year, owners of great private estates will begin to see the value and merits of frugal and honest government."

Effect on the House Leaders of the Ancouncement That the President to with Rim, WASHINGTON, July 23.-The announcement in THE SUN this morning that the President has prepared a message which he may send to Congress urging reciprocity on the lines laid down by Mr. Blaine, but going even further than the Secretary has, opened the eyes of the House leaders to the formidable opposition they may encounter in attempting to kill off Mr. Blaine's plan. It is already virtually deelded by the members of the Finance Committee and other leading Republican Senators that a reciprocity feature similar to that proposed by Senator Pierce shall be put into the Tariff bill. Members of the Ways and Means Committee are equally determined that it shall not be, and an interesting contest is looked forward to in the Senate and conference committee. Mr. Blaine has heretofore been the sole object of attack by those who have no inclination toward his reciprocity policy, but since it has become known that the President endorses the Secretary's views, the anti-administration men are becoming more impartial in their antagonism. The statement made by Senator Hale that the President and Mr. Blaine are acting in entire barmony in this matter, is berne out by the fact that Mr. Harrison seems determined to send his message to Congress. In behalf of Chairman McKinley and members of his committee who are necessarily so outspoken in their opposition to Mr. Blaine's programme, it is now said that when the Secretary went before the Ways and Means Committee in the winter he said nothing whatever about reciprocity with Cuba, but referred only to the products of the Argentine Republic, A Republican member, who no doubt speaks the sentiment of Mr. McKinley and those who think with him, said to-day:

"The main objection to carrying out Mr. Blaine's suggestion is that it designs admitting Australian wool free. This would be death to the wool industry in this country, and probably to the Republican party. Chairman McKinley, as heretofore, halts at wool. He probably to the Republican party. Chairman McKiniey, as heretofore, halts at wool. He feels that the loss of Ohio in the coming campaign would be a blow from which the party would have difficulty to recover, and that it would be disastrous to even hint at free wool. This is no well understood and appreciated that no Ohio Representative would dare to vote for the pian proposed by Mr. Blaine and endorsed by the President."

Another member, whose seat in Congress is not affected by the sentiment in Ohio and who has talked with Mr. Blaine on the subject, says: "What Mr. Blaine wants is toget a free market in the Southern republics for the cotion manufacturers of New England in exchange for the free admission of wool into this soon of wool would give free raw material to the New England manufacturers, as well as open the Spanish-American markets to them. It is more than sugar that interests Mr. Blaine."

It looks now very much as though the reciprocity programme would be added to the Tariff bill in the Senate by a large majority, and go to a conference committee for settlement, Representative Caudier of Massachusetts, representing the importers of that State, went to the President to day to protest against the issue of any message on the subject of reciprocity, while the Tariff bill was still being considered. He told the President that any further delay in the consideration or passage of the bill meant an immens loss of money to the importers, and would have a ruinous effect on trade in general. The time for any more tariff tinkering, he said, had already gone past, and the main and, indeed, the only thing to do was to pass the bill. The Republican party cannot afford to commit itself on this question without a thorough debate, reaching over months, or at least weeks. He said:

"If you send in a message in favor of reciprocity you must expect to see it shelved at once, or debated for a time that will prolong the session until after election day."

The Iresident listened very closely, but gave no decisive answer. Mr

THERE WILL RE SOME HOT AUGUST POLITICS, AFTER ALL. Mr. Grace and the Other County Democrate will be Told that Their Flirting with Republicans Forfelta Their Claim to the Vacant Seat in the State Committee. The call for the meeting of the Democratic State Committee has not yet been received by the city members of that body, though Chairman Edward Murphy, Jr., of Troy has announced his intention to call a meeting, to be held in Saratoga the first week in August-But there is no doubt that the notices will soon come to hand in the beautiful chirogaphy of Secretary Charles R. De Freest, At least, the city members are discussing the meeting as a certainty of the early days of next month. This discussion is not on the lines of the first fulmination that followed the announcement of the early meeting. Then the midsummer devotees of long-range politics saw in the convocation of the committee a deep but darkly discernible purpose to play serious politics. "There is no State ticket this year, only a Court of Appeals Judge is to be elected," said these summer statesmen.

"Now is the chance for the Hill men and the Tammany men to unite against the County Democracy members of the committee, and to incontinently fire them out on account of their alliance with the Republicans, their deal with Tom Platt, last fall."

The County Democrats and Tammany men alike seized on this suggestion as fraught with great importance, and very excitedly discussed it. The former said that there would be postic and political justice in carrying out the suggestion, and that the members of the County Democracy organization could not complain if

Democracy organization could not complain if it were done, as they had proceeded on exactly the pian indicated when they wanted to get rid the action of the committee, They were chosen by the delegates by Congressional districts in a State Convention, and not made by any action of the State Committee. Justice Fower, the County Democracy leader, agreed with this; but said that he would not bother to talk about it because he did not believe that the State Committee would try to do anything of the kind.

William R, Grace, the State Committeeman whose responsibility for the alliance with the Bloublicans and liability to expulsion from the Democratic Committee was the chief feature of the rumor referred to, was equally skentical, but he said that any attempt at ejecting his colleagues or himself would result in an elegant row.

As it now appears, Justice Power was right.
There will be no attempt to count be sitting of them. The resignation of Police Commissloner Voorhis, which has been in the hands of Secretary He Freest since Nov. 4, 1889, will furnish the vacancy. The County Democrate will claim that it is their right to name his successor

They will be supported by the Tan many members. Then the fun will begin. The counties

The life and interest that such a controversy will inject into the meeting of the State Committee can readily be imagined. But it is said that there is more to follow. It is understood that Mr. Grace will be rather vigorously interrogated as to his share in making a combine with the licentificians. He will be asked to explain his course and conduct in the campaign of 1855 as well as that of 1859, and an opportunity will be afforded to him to say whether it is true that he declared in 1858 that he would risk Cloveland's election for the sake of beating Hill.

CAMP LIFE AT PREESKILL. The Grand Guard Enveloped in a Thick Mantle of Glory.

PREESEILL CAMP. July 28.-The great on gagement with the enemy which Col. Austen had arranged for to-day did not come off. Ferhaps there wasn't any enemy in sight. The signal men did not report any, and they were observing the country for miles around. They chose for the centre of their operations the same place that Gen. Israel Putnam chose 100 years ago-the hill back of Peckskill, near the head of the Annsville Creek, that is marked with a creat of tall trees. These trees, which have grown up in place of those out down by Putnam, stand within a 30-foot ercular earthwork, whose walls are almost as perfect as they were a century ago. Without the fort the second growth of timber has been cut away, and now a third growth is coming up. In this clump of trees Capt. Gallun's men are building a station. It is hidden from the camp by rocks that jut from the mess hall hill toward the creek, and to reach it by signal an intermediate station was established in the Cortland: cemetery two miles away. Col. Austen, however, was not content to abandon his battle arrangements entirely. In the absence of Lieut.-Coi, Harding, who was called to New York on business, he took comcalled to New York on business, he took command in terson and led the regiment, in fighting order, far out across country, up the valley of the Itoa Hook stream.

The grand guard, which went out vesterday under tapt, George Cochran, got in about misinght. Every National Guardsman is superior to military orders; but for fear some of them don't the general orders for grand guard duty tell them that persons in plain clothes are not to be disturbed or stopped. Capt. Cochran tried to impress this upon his officers. All but one of them—a smooth-faced Lieutenant who had command of the rear guard—understood. About it o'clock he began capturing persons who were going into it away from the camp. The first prisoner stood upon his rights.

"Tell me your name and business," said the Lieutenant, and I will let you go.

"No, sir," said the citizen, "I will not tell you my name. I am on a public highway, and will held you personally responsible if you detain me."

you my name. I am on a public highway, and I will hold you personally responsible if you detain me."

How this might have ended if there had been no higher powers present is a problem.

"A general officer commands you not to detain a citizen," an orderly cried, running up.

The officer referred to was Brig.-tien. Barber, He, too, had been a prisoner only a moment before. "Let no man in uniform examins your line." Capt. Cochran had ordered. Just then Gen. Barber, who had been out for a pleasure ride, came along. "Hait! Dismount!" Bayonets were on either side of him. He got down. "I shail have to blindfold you." The General did a bit of swearing, but it was no use. He was taken blindfold through the lines leading his horse, and have a cally just released when he gave the order not to interfere with citizens.

Ten minutes laster two bors went out of the camp ground, driving a team. They, too, were haited and taken off the wagon. Their team was unlitched and the harness taken off, and the two bors were led out, blindfolded, and sent home with their horses. This morning the man who owns the toam made a complaint at headquariers. "One of my horses." he said." wis jabbed in the shoulder with a hayonet. Col. Phlaterer was another prisoner who had Somebody will have to pay for it if the horse was hurt.

They Have a Milarlous Reception-Grand Scene in the Harber at Night.

ON BOARD THE ATLANTA, SQUADBON OF EVO-LUTION. RIO DE JANEIRO, June 27.-During the stay of the squadron in Bahia the greatest precautions were taken to preserve the health of the crows. The brilliant white uniforms, which so pleased the taste of Admiral Walker when in Europe, gave place to plain blue uniforms, which still continue to hold their own. While in Bahia the Admiral, accompanied by his Fiag Lioutenant, called officially on the Governor, who received him at the landing and drove him in a carriage with four white horses to his residence. The Admiral spent the greater part of the afternoon in conversation with the Governor, who speaks very good English. The Governor called on the Admiral next day. He was received with a salute of seventeen guns.

but no liberty was given to the crews of the

The squadron remained five days in Bahia. The commissioned officers were permitted to visit the shore daily, but were obliged to return on board their ships before sundown. On June 19 the three ships stood out of the harbor of Bahia. At 5:44 P. M, the same evening the Atlanta signalled the flagship for permission to stop, her jorurnals having become greatly heated. At 6:24 she resumed her course, but again asked permission to stop at 7:20. Steaming at an average speed of eight knots, the squadron made Cape Frio at 4 A. M. June 23, and at v.2 A.M. the colors were holsted on the three shies and half masted again, while the ceremonies of respect for the dead were gone through.

Samuel Taylor, an ordinary seaman, who was transferred from the Boston at the Cape de Verdes, had died of hemorrhage of the lungs, and the poor fellow was consigned, with a shot at his feet, to his long home. This makes the third death that has occurred in the squadron since its departure from the United States.

the squadion since its departure from the United States.

When the ships rounded Sugar Loaf Mountain, which lies on the left hand side of the entrance to the harbor of Rio de Janeiro, the forts on each side thundered forth national salutes of twenty-one guns at the same time dipping their colons—a very unusual thing for forts to de. Afterward bands of music were heard playing "The Star Spangled Hanner" and "Haif Columbia," and as the ships croceeded up the harbor bang! bang! bang! went the six-pounders of the Brazilian ships and the inner forts, the Chicago responding gun for gun.

and the inner forts, the United to specify the gui for gun.

Next day a salute of seventeen guns was fired in honor of Admiral Walker from the fort on shore, and a flottile of boats, consisting of four steam launches having in tow three boats each and bearing the navel and military and civil authorities of the de Janeiro, passed around the ships, displaying United States and Brazilian ensigns and cheering for the "mother republic."

Lieut Fullam of the Chicago felt so enthusiastic that It was impossible for him to remain

Lieut Fullam of the Chicago felt so enthusi-natic that it was impossible for him to remain on the quarter deck, so he led a crowd of blue jackets into the mainton, where cheers for the new republic of Brazil were given vorifarously time and again. At night the Brazilian shins were illuminated and lireworks were set off. The night being very dark, a wonderfully pic-turesque scene was afforded the American mariners. The lights of the boats, the music and cheering, and the towering dark moun-tains on each side of the harbor all combined to make the scene one of remarkable beauty and splendor. and splendor.

But one case of yellow fever is reported as existing in the city. The general health of the squadron is good.

After a short visit to England and Ireland they will leave for New York salling from Queenstown sarly in September.

THE GREAT STOCK-YARDS DEAL. Many Other Stock-yard Interests Will Soos

CHICAGO, July 23 .- The new stock-yards syndicate has begun negotiations for the purchase outright of the National Stock Yards at St. Louis, the Union Stock Yards at St. Joseph. Mo.; the Union Stock Yards at South St. Paul. and the smaller yards at Iowa City. It is said further that the immense corporation has its agents at work in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia. and New York, and other points in the East and contemplates controlling every stock yard in this country. The price agreed upon for the St. Joseph. Mo., stock yards is understood to be $1.250,000.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the stock subscriptions, which have been going on for two days. closed because everything had been taken. A telegram from Boston says that Boston and New York people have taken $8,000,000 of the stock, leaving only $5,000,000 for Chicago and the English, and the English have secured only $2,500,000; so that they are far from having a controlling interest. But they are more largely interested in this subscription for the bonds which the corporation will issue. A man who knows all about the deal said this morning:

"It was about as smooth a piece of engineer. "It was about as smooth a piece of engineering as was ever done, this wresting of the management of the deal out of the hands of the British. They had about got things lixed for themselves, but they had no idea that any one in this country had enough money to outbid them in so large a transaction. So they did some talking that was fatal to them as it is always to people who are making financial deals.

some talking that was fatal to them, as it is always to people who are making financial deals.

"This is going to be a bigger corporation than the English brewery syndicate. When these people get through landing all the stock yards in the country and extend their influence to Western ranches and the farms of the hississippi valley, it will be petit well prepared to say whether you or I shall eat meat or not. Then they have let enough Englishmen in to control English legislation on the beef question, and it is certain that they are preparing to court the favor of tiermany to the extent of getting legislation favorable to the American hog."

"Do you know anything about the negotiations for the nurchase of these outside stock yards?" he was asked.

"You are right as far as you have gone, but the deal extends all over this country. There are a half hundred of these stock yards of more or less magnitude, and they will have them all in. I could give you a half dozen deals that are on that you haven't got, but you have fully enough to illustrate the point. There is a noint that none of you newspaper men seem to have caught on to, however. It is this. For a good many years the financial interests of the English syndicates, the Vanderblit system, and the Astor family have clashed, and their representatives have not harmonized. Now you see the lion and lambs all lying down together. All three interests are represented in the directory of the new corporation."

EX-POSTMASTER HENDRIX.

Employees of the Brooklyn Post Office Give Him a Handsome Punch Bowl. The esteem in which ex-Postmaster Joseph C. Hendrix of Brooklyn is held by the 600 or 00 employees of the Post Office was very pleasantly shown last night, when a delegation of the employees, headed by Postmaster Collins, Deputy Postmaster Smith, and Super-Intendent of City Delivery Smith called at his house, at 307 President street, and presented to him a handsome gold and silver nunch bowl and ladle, which cost between $400 and $500, and bore this inscription:
